LIFE IN SHADOWS
HIDDEN CHILDREN AND THE HOLOCAUST

UNITED STATES HOLOCAUST MEMORIAL MUSEUM
The exhibition Life in Shadows details remarkable stories of desperation, tragedy, courage, and survival. In the face of brutal Nazi policies, Jewish parents sought to save their children by placing them with friends, strangers, or institutions. With the risks high and the danger of discovery ever present, hidden children and their families faced many challenges, including procuring false papers; finding a place to hide; creating new identities; avoiding blackmail, abuse, and betrayal; and converting to new religions. The difficulties were immense, and not all efforts were successful.

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum has assembled more than 100 artifacts, documents, photographs, and oral histories from children who survived the Holocaust. In conjunction with the exhibition, the Museum offers a series of spring programs that focus on children struggling to survive in the darkest of times.
First Person is a series of conversations and eyewitness accounts by Holocaust survivors. Each hour-long program is conducted as a live interview with an opportunity for audience participation.

Our guests, formerly hidden children, discuss daily life in hiding with non-Jewish families and their quest for family after World War II.

In 1942, one day before Jews were deported from her town in Poland, Lidia Kleinman Siciarz was hidden by a nurse in the hospital where her father worked as a doctor. Lidia was later smuggled out and obtained false papers to live in a Catholic orphanage. When suspicion arose that Lidia was Jewish, she continued her ruse as a Catholic student and was sent to live in a convent. Reservations are not required.

Thursday, March 11, 1 p.m.
Rubinstein Auditorium
Tswi Herschel never knew his parents. Born in December 1942, he was hidden with the De Jongs, a Dutch family, in April 1943. Shortly thereafter, in July, his parents were deported from the Netherlands to the Sobibór killing center. The De Jongs renamed Tswi “Henkie,” raised him as a Christian, and treated him as their son. Tswi learned about his origins from his paternal grandmother, who reclaimed him after the war, and from notebooks and documents that had belonged to his parents. Reservations are not required.

In March 1943, four-year-old Hannah Kastan Weiss was rounded up with her parents and taken to Berlin’s Jewish Home for the Aged, one of the key assembly points for deportations to Auschwitz. Hannah’s grandmother, a non-Jew, spotted the child and managed to smuggle her away. For more than two years, Hannah remained hidden in her grandparents’ apartment. When the war ended in 1945, Hannah learned that both her parents had been killed. Reservations are not required.
An Evening with Abraham Foxman
Thursday, April 15, 1 p.m.
Rubinstein Auditorium

Abraham H. Foxman, National Director of the Anti-Defamation League, was born in 1940 and spent the war years in Lithuania as a hidden child. After the war, he was reunited with his parents. Joan Ringelheim, the Museum’s Director of Oral History, will interview Foxman about his life as a hidden child and how he has coped with this history. Reservations may be made by calling 202.488.0407.

Creating the Exhibition Life in Shadows: Hidden Children and the Holocaust
Thursday, April 29, 7 p.m.
Rubinstein Auditorium

In 2002, United States Holocaust Memorial Museum curators Steve Luckert (top left) and Suzy Snyder (center left) began the challenging task of developing the Life in Shadows exhibition. In this interview with journalist Bill Benson, the curators will discuss the genesis of this exhibition and their search to find artifacts, documents, and oral testimonies of Holocaust survivors who had been hidden children. Alfred Munzer (bottom left), himself a hidden child, will join the interview and discuss what it was like for a survivor to be involved in this project. Reservations may be made by calling 202.488.0407.
As If It Were Yesterday
(Comme Si C’était Hier)
Produced and directed by Myriam Abramowicz and Esther Hoffenberg
(85 minutes, 1980)
Rubinstein Auditorium
Friday, March 5, 1 p.m.

More than 4,000 Jewish children were spared arrest, deportation, and extermination through the courageous acts of a small Belgian network during the Holocaust. Through interviews and anecdotes from those who participated in the rescue effort, this film relates the story of both Jews and non-Jews who worked together to hide, place, and save the lives of Jewish children in Belgium.

Diamonds in the Snow
Written and directed by Mira Reym Binford
(59 minutes, 1994)
Rubinstein Auditorium
Friday, March 12, 1 p.m.

Thousands of children lived in the Polish city of Bedzin before the Holocaust. Less than a dozen survived. One of the survivors, Mira Reym Binford, created this award-winning documentary to tell her story and that of two other survivors from the town. These women recount their experiences hiding from the Nazis and reflect on the courage of those who helped them survive. The film examines the complexity of human nature and stereotypes about Jews, Poles, and Germans in World War II Europe.

The Hidden Child
Written and directed by Yehuda Yaniv
(51 minutes, 2001)
Rubinstein Auditorium
Friday, March 19, 1 p.m.

This film documents the story of Prof. Saul Friedlander, Holocaust historian and survivor. The documentary follows Friedlander as he returns to Prague, the city his family left as the persecution of Jews escalated during World War II. Friedlander recounts his family’s trip to a convent in France where he was placed in hiding with nuns.
Secret Lives: Hidden Children and Their Rescuers during World War II
Produced and directed by Aviva Slesin (72 minutes, 2002)
Rubinstein Auditorium
Friday, March 26, 1 p.m.

This film tells the story of a small number of Jewish children from Belgium, France, Holland, Lithuania, and Poland who were saved from the Nazis by non-Jews who, at great personal risk, took them into their homes as an extraordinary act of human decency. Whether hidden for months or years, the experience affected both the hidden children and their rescuers profoundly and is the focus of this new documentary produced and directed by Academy Award winner Aviva Slesin, herself a former hidden child.

Finding Family
Written and directed by Jeff Hirsh and Jeff Barnhill (59 minutes, 2003)
Rubinstein Auditorium
Friday, April 2, 1 p.m.

Henry Blumenstein was a child in 1939 when, after fleeing Nazi-occupied Austria, his family gained passage with other Jewish refugees on the St. Louis. When the ship was abruptly refused entry by Cuba and sent back to Europe, the family found its way to Amsterdam. Henry’s mother placed him in hiding with the Dijkstras, a poor Catholic Dutch family, shortly before she was captured and sent to Auschwitz. This documentary follows Henry back to Holland as he visits the Amsterdam house and the rural farm where he lived, as well as his school and the Catholic church where he was an altar boy. During this visit, Henry meets the descendants of the Dijkstras and is able to give thanks for the kindness and courage he experienced from their family during the war.

SPECIAL EXHIBITION OPENS SPRING 2004

Deadly Medicine: Creating the Master Race
Opens April 22
Sidney Kimmel and Rena Rowan Exhibition Gallery, Lower Level

From 1933 to 1945, Nazi Germany carried out a campaign to “cleanse” German society of individuals viewed as biological threats to the nation’s “health.” Enlisting the help of physicians and medically trained geneticists, psychiatrists, and anthropologists, the Nazis developed racial health policies that began with the mass sterilization of “genetically diseased” persons and ended with the near annihilation of European Jewry. The exhibition explores this topic through documentary photographs, period films and film footage, and artifacts from 40 European and American collections.
