Documenting Life and Destruction
Holocaust Sources in Context

SERIES EDITOR
Jürgen Matthäus

CONTRIBUTING EDITOR
Jan Lambertz
This groundbreaking series provides a new perspective on history using first-hand accounts of the lives of those who suffered through the Holocaust, those who perpetrated it, and those who witnessed it as bystanders. The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum’s Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies presents a wide range of documents from different archival holdings, expanding knowledge about the lives and fates of Holocaust victims and making these resources broadly available to the general public and scholarly communities for the first time.

Books in the Series

2. Children during the Holocaust, Patricia Heberer (2011)
This publication has been made possible by support from

The Gerald M. and Mary L. Fisch Fund for Study of the Holocaust in Hungary

Claims Conference

The William S. and Ina Levine Foundation

The Blum Family Foundation

and

Dr. Alfred Munzer and Mr. Joel Wind

The authors have worked to provide clear information about the provenance of each document and illustration included here. In some instances, particularly for journals and newspapers no longer in print, we have been unable to verify the existence or identity of any present copyright owners. If notified of any items inadvertently credited wrongly, we will include updated credit information in reprints of this work.
THE HOLOCAUST IN HUNGARY
Evolution of a Genocide

Zoltán Vági, László Csősz, and Gábor Kádár

Foreword by Randolph L. Braham

Advisory Committee:

Christopher R. Browning
David Engel
Sara Horowitz
Steven T. Katz
Alvin H. Rosenfeld

AltaMira Press
in association with the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum
2013
Your Excellency,

Following the kind invitation of Your Excellency, on the 16th of this month, I traveled to the Klessheim castle in order to exchange, in accordance with our allied status and our mutual interests, our thoughts about questions concerning our cooperation.

Because I think it is of utmost importance that our countries maintain the same open and trusting relations we have had in the past, I consider it my duty to respond in some detail to the reproaches directed at me during our long conversations on this occasion.

According to one such reproach, the treatment of the Jews is allegedly much too lenient in Hungary. Concerning this question and without being presumptuous, I wish to cite the fact that at the time, I was the first to raise my voice against the destructive behavior of the Jews, and I have ever since taken every measure to curb their influence. This was a new trend at the time, and because of it, my country was boycotted by Germany, as well as the rest of the world. However, the measures that I undertook practically stripped the Jews of the opportunity to continue exerting their harmful influence on the public affairs of the country. The enormity of the difficulties that had to be overcome in the process is due to the fact that before this, commerce and industry were almost entirely in Jewish hands. At present, we have further measures underway aimed at gradually shutting out the Jews, and we will carry out their deportation as soon as conditions for their transportation are secured. [. . .]

In this letter Horthy continued with detailed assurances about his country’s loyalty to the alliance and Hungary’s commitment to joint goals in the war. Addressing the Jewish question, he briefly summarized the rationale that Hungarian diplomats had also used before in response to German demands: the indispensability of the Jews to the economy, technical difficulties impeding

---

118. He means the immediate post–World War I era.
119. Horthy is referring to the introduction of the numerus clausus in 1920, which was one of the first anti-Jewish laws in Europe introduced after World War I. See the glossary.