

Dutch Holocaust survivors convene

By Ruth Roman

The year 1985 will be remembered for its many memorial services and gatherings throughout the world, commemorating the 40 years since the end of the Holocaust.

Most survivors are of Polish origin and hardly anything is said about the once-prosperous Jewish population of Holland, almost all of whom went to their death via the transit camp of Westerbork, in the most desolate part of Holland.

In the five years of the German occupation, 100,000 people passed through the camp on their way to the East, most of the time to Auschwitz. Five per cent returned.

Three survivors and their families — Warner Hirsh, Harry Heller and Hermann Wingens, now living in greater New York, met with the idea of a reunion. They played with the thought, wrote letters to people they remembered, and hoped for it to snowball. It did, and after a lot of work and meetings they had a firm commitment of 151 people for a weekend at Grossinger's in Upstate New York, from Friday, June 7, till Sunday, June 9.

My journey did not lead through Westerbork, but my husband was there for a rather long time, and when he received the list of people he would meet again he knew he wanted to go; so we went. I was not really looking forward to it — but our best friends would spend the weekend with us and I decided to make the best of it.

The committee had done a wonderful job and it was heartwarming to see people searching for each other and falling into each others arms, just trying to bridge 40 years. Most of the time nametags were definitely necessary.

The program for Friday evening was very loose, just getting together and talking with the promise of films and workshops for the next day.

I was tired and went to our room before my husband did. In the elevator was another lady. I glanced at her nametag — "aren't you R.K.?" — this being her maiden-name.

"Yes, but you?" I told her. First there was an unbelieving look and then it came all flooding back.

We had shared the same bunk and every morsel of bread. "What are you doing here?" I asked, since I knew that she, too had never gone through Westerbork. She told me that she was a volunteer worker, conducting the interviews of the Holocaust survivors and setting up the Holocaust Memorial and Research Center in New York.

Werner, my husband, had already agreed to give an interview, but she wanted one from me, too. I could not understand why: "Ruth, we were together all of the two years, I can only sat the same that I am sure you already did."

"Yes," she said, "I did, but I have nobody else to substantiate it, I really want you to do it."

I had not counted on this, but how could I refuse — and having a good memory for names, dates and places, it was no problem; they are always too close on the surface anyhow.

The next day, Saturday, we saw an excellent film from the Memorial Service in Holland, at which the Queen Mother, Juliana, as well as other dignitaries were present. It was very moving to see the Queen kneeling and placing a memorial on what is left of the camp-site of Westerbork — a piece of rail bent upwards, leading to no-where.

In the evening was a prayer-service as well as speeches. The Dutch Consul was there and Rabbi Lehman from New York. He was younger than most of us, but had in his congregation quite a few survivors. He had officiated at many of their simchas and zores, and being a good speaker he was quite right for the evening. A true human interest story was the presence on a Canadian officer, who was in the first Canadian unit to enter Westerbork. On a chance he inquired, "Is a Robert Engel here? Yes, he was, and when confronted, the officer said: "I am your brother-in-law, I am married to your sister."

"Well, thank God, for your coming," Robert said, and Thank God for your coming, we all said again, now 40 years later.

Last but not least, I want to mention the many pictures, posters and exhibits, which were displayed for this week end, as well as the many books I had never heard of, and I have read a great deal on the subject.

Most disturbing for me was the book of 19 transports from Westerbork to Sobibor; the last one being the largest — 2,000 people, on July 20, 1943, arriving three days later, with a detailed description of the bitter end. In my mind I saw 2,000 times my parents, who were on that train.

My husband, too, found the answer about Zamosk — the end for his parents. Another Babi Yar on a smaller scale, close to the Russian border.

It doesn't really matter where our parents died — one camp is as gruesome as the other, but the probing never ends and we keep on wanting to know.

I will end on a happier note, by mentioning the second generation. There were quite a few second and even third generations there, and I made it a point to ask them why they came and what they thought. They were wonderful kids, happy and proud by just being alive.

All in all, it was quite a weekend.

Chabad Irvine library expands hours of use

The Lamberg-Aronson-Bernstein Library at Chabad of Irvine Jewish Center has been officially open to the public since January.

"Children and adults alike are welcomed regardless of their age or affiliation, to come and take out the many fascinating and informative books," says librarian Esther Gitlin. Throughout the year more than 294 books were borrowed from the library, she said.

"Chabad takes pride in the service that the library provides to the community. Now there is a place where one can go to research his or her thirst for Jewish knowledge, find answers to their questions, or just read a book that is exciting and thought provoking."

The library at COLJC offers novels and children's story books; as well as books on medicine and science, Kabbala and law, she said.

During the summer months, COLJC will make the library available to all by expanding the library hours from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. every day, she said.

For more information, call COLJC at (714) 786-5000.
